On hearing this ejaculation, each student is required, forthwith, to extinguish his candle, say Deo gratias and fall asleep. This is the regular routine subject to a slight variation on Wednesday, Saturday, and Sunday, on the first of which days they go on the public walk, on the second to Confession, and on the third to Communion, to High Mass, to vespers, and to an experimental sermon, preached by the students of the three divinity classes, in rotation. Let me now sum up the periods of the day at which the rule of silence does not hold. There are almost forty minutes after breakfast, half an hour after first class, an hour and ten minutes after dinner, and about half an hour after supper. These united periods make just two hours and fifty minutes. So that out of the twentyfour hours, there are...
