Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Lohengrin: Romantic Opera, in Three Acts Henry I, surnamed The Fowler, King of Germany, has arrived at Antwerp for the purpose of raising an army with which to oppose the Hungarians, who are about to invade his dominions. At the time of the King's visit, Brabant is in a state of great excitement, owing to a report that the youthful Godfrey has been murdered by his sister Elsa. Denouncing Elsa, Telramund, the husband of Ortrud, daughter of the Prince of Friesland, claims his right to the Dukedom of Brabant, and offers to meet in mortal combat anyone ready to champion the cause of Elsa. Elsa calmly announces her innocence, but the King is compelled to allow the trial by battle. The Herald proclaims Who will do battle here for life or death for Elsa of Brabant? and the four trumpeters sound. At first there is no response, and the anxiety of Elsa's many sympathizers is intense. Elsa kneels in prayer when suddenly in the distance appears a boat drawn by a white swan;...
